Descendants of David Walker and Margaret Hetherington

1. David¹ WALKER^{1,2,3} was born on 25 June 1762 in Dumfries, Dumfriesshire, Scotland.⁴ He married Margaret Hetherington on 1 July 1783 in Annan, Dumfriesshire, Scotland; they may have been married in Lanarkshire (see source 2070).^{5,6,7,8} He married Ann Bramble, daughter of ? Bremble and Sarah Bremble, on 13 April 1825 in Prince County, Prince Edward Island, (Canada); Harold Cairns has a marriage year of 1835, but 1825 is written in the 1795 family bible.⁹ He died on 15 April 1844 in (probably), New Annan, Prince County, Prince Edward Island, (Canada), at age 81.¹⁰

"Wa(u)lking the Cloth", extracted from a Scottish list: 'Walker' means 'Walker of the Cloth'. This was a transitional process from liquid to cloth, and workers walked it in their bare feet to stretch it. In the Highlands 'waulking' the tweed is a process of shrinking the cloth. A group (usually women) would sit around a wooden table and the long length of damp tweed was held by them all. It was passed through their hands, and bumped down on the table as it was passed along. There were traditional song's sung to maintain the rhythm of the waulking.

¹¹ He immigrated circe 1010 to New Annan, Prince County, Prince Edward Island; David Walker and Marge commennation landed at Malpeque, Prince Edward Island, ca. 1819. It is known that David was granted a license to sell "spirituous liquors" in 1820, published 21 October 1820.¹² He was on "A List of Licensed Retailers" in Prince County, "David Walker, Lot 19" on 21 October 1820 in New ¹John Walker & Jane Weir, Walker Family Bible (John Walker, (n.p.: n.pub., unknown); Helen (Walker) Cairns, Helen Walker. Hereinafter cited as Walker Family Bible (John Walker).

The first example uses an Anecdote tag. In this case the superscripted citation number appears in the next line, rather than immediately following the anecdote text.

In both cases the solution is to use the embedded citation option at the end of the memo, placing it prior to the carriage return.

The second step is to right click on the citation, and from the drop down menu select "exclude this citation", which places a '-' symbol to the left of the number. The citation number will then print only once.

In this second example there are several odd looking entries and unknowns.

One solution to this problem is to edit this particular output form, by deleting references to the publisher in the Full footnote and Bibliography.
